The early Henagan family is believed to have come to the "Welsh Neck" settlement in the Cheraws District (now the part known as the Pee Dee section) of South Carolina prior to 1756 from North Carolina, Virginia, or Maryland. Since some members of the family used the name Sweeny, Swinny, etc. and some Henagan (Henegan, Hennigan, etc.) this has made it difficult to secure genealogical data on our early family.

A ticket was granted to Thomas Swinny on October 7, 1679 to sail from the Barbadoes to New England, New York, Antigua, Jamacia, New Foundland, and other places on the Sloop, True Friendship, (Kallahane, Commander) as listed in the book "Emigrants" 1600-1700 - by Hotten on page 408 (Library of Congress). It is not known the destination of this Thomas Swinny.

The early records in Virginia show the name Sweeny, Swinny, etc. in several instances. Torrence's Virginia Wills and Administrations, 1632-1800, list no Henagan, but several Sweeny wills and inventories, the earliest dated 1734. The Register of St. Peters Parish, New Kent County, Virginia, shows that Joseph and Mary Swinney had a daughter born and baptized in 1736, and Joseph and Eliza Swinney had sons born in 1767 and 1770. The following found in Volume I, page 334, Encyclopedia of Virginia Biography: "Sweeney (Swinney), Meritt, was son of Edmond Sweeney, a justice of the peace for Elizabeth City County in 1687 and other years. Meritt Sweeney was also a justice, and was Burgess for Elizabeth City County in the assemblies of 1737-1740 and 1742-1747. He married Jane Wilson, daughter of Colonel William Wilson, and widow of Nicholas Arrle and James Ricketts, and left issue - Roscoe Sweeney and others (Martha and Priscilla). The following found in Volume VI, part I, Calendar of Virginia State Papers, August 11, 1792-- May 31, 1793: "May 27, 1793 - a list of Captain Hugh Caperton's Company on page 383 ....JAMES SWEENEY, G. Brier; on furlough (Married 9 May) 20 days."

Early records located in the Hall of Records, State of Maryland, Annapolis, Maryland show numerous Sweeny (Swinny, Sweeney, etc.) in Anne Arundel, Queen Anne, Prince Georges, St. Marys, and Talbot Counties. Wills located are those of Bryan Sweeny of Talbot County in 1699 and Darby Sweeny of Prince Georges County in 1722. Darby Sweeny's will lists these heirs: His wife Mary and sons John, Darby and James. An early land grant was made to James Sweeny in 1710. No records found of the name Henagan.

Early Colonial and State Records of North Carolina shows the following reference to Henagan found in Volume VI: "The Colonial House of Representatives received, November 26, 1757, the Pet'n of Joseph Henagan setting forth that he enlisted in his Majesty's service.....and by reason of several hardships which he endured whilst in the service he is rendered incapable to get his livelihood, praying relief, etc. (p.894).....Resolved that the Treasurer of the Southern District pay the said Joseph Henagan forty pounds, proclamation money towards payment of his debts contracted here by the said Joseph Henagan and for his passage hence home (p.896). This resolution was sent to "His Majesty's Hon'ble Council" which concurred (p.901.)" "At an Assembly of North Carolina held at New Bern, Thursday, November 18, 1762, "Mr. Waddell presented Certificates from the County Court of Bladen therein recommending Thomas Bryan, Junior, John Swinney Henagan, and John McFatter all of said County to be exempt from paying Public Taxes and doing Public Duties. Granted. (P.912)." Records also show that Darby Henagan (brother of Barnabas Henagan of South Carolina) served or furnished supplies for the American Revolution (Volume IX, page 57, Folio 4, Book L. No. 20-24). There are numerous records found of the Sweeny (Swinny, etc.) family in the early North Carolina records. Records found show that John Sweeny, James Sweeny, and Thomas Sweeny served or furnished supplies for the cause of the American Revolution.

In the office of the Secretary of State, State of South Carolina, Columbia, South Carolina and in the Department of Archives of South Carolina, Columbia, South Carolina early land grants to Henagans and Sweenys are as follows: 500 acres in Craven County on May 23, 1734 to Miles Sweeney; 150 acres on Ford of Broad and Saluda Rivers on Marcy 8, 1755 to Jacob Henagan (Henegin); 200 acres in Berkley County on Enoree Creek in the Fork of Broad and Saluda Rivers on February 5, 1763 to Reubin Henagan (Hannigan). Other early land grant records were made to Barnabas Henagan of 250 acres in Craven County on April 21, 1774; 150 acres in Craven County to Darby Henagan on November 28, 1771; and 500 acres in Craven County to Darby Henagan on July 8, 1774. Subsequent grants to Barnabas Henagan, Darby Henagan, John Sweeny, and Darby Sweeny are numerous as found in the office of the Secretary of State of South Carolina and Department of Archives, State of South Carolina.

From Gregg's History of the Old Cheraws (pp.90-91): "About this time-1756 - the names of....James Sweeny....(and others) are found among the records of early Settlements." "James Sweeny is supposed to have been the progenitor of the present family of Henagan. It is known that this was called Sweeny family at an early period. When or why the change took place, it is not known to the present generation (written in 1867 WCH)."

From Kinfolks, Volume III, by W.C. Harllee (p.2357): "James Henagan, known also as Sweeny, etc. was probably born in North Carolina where families of those names were early colonial residents. He died probably either in Cheraw District, in part now of Marlboro County, or in Georgetown District, in part later Marion and later Marion and Dillon County." From Kinfolks, Volume III (p.2354): "James Henagan was known also as James Sweeny. Although the family surname was Henagan, some of the family were known as, and used the surnames, Sweeney, Swinny, etc., some of their descendants resuming the surname Henagan. These changes were probably due to hyphenated names sometimes used in the old countries. Perhaps the family surname Sweeny-Henagan or Henagan-Sweeny, etc., and some chose Sweeny, etc., and others Henagan when they came to this country, where the hyphenated names were not stylish in olden times."

Grimes' Abstract of North Carolina Wills, 1690-1760 (p.103), shows that "John Henagan nicknamed Sweeny" witnessed the will of Edward Dudley dated January 22, 1774-1745 (1774 Julian, 1745 Georgian, or present calendar), and that the will was proved at New Bern April 3, 1745, before Gab:(riel) Johnston (the Governor of the province). Before 1760, Wills in North Carolina could be proved only before the governor of the province."

Mrs. Louise N. Bissonette, 56 Society Street, Charleston, South Carolina, a granddaughter of Dr. Barnabas K. Henagan (Governor of South Carolina in 1840) has stated a number of times that she had been told that we descended from a kinsman of Lord Baltimore names Sweeny that came over with him when Maryland was settled.

James (Sweeny) Henagan that is first mentioned as being in the Cheraws District, South Carolina in 1756 had a number of children, some using the surname Henagan and others Sweeny as follows: (a) Barnabas Henagan; (b) Darby Henagan; (c) Mary Henagan (Married John Bethea); (d) John Sweeny; (e) Cyrus Sweeny. Barnabas Henagan is the progenitor of the Henagan family that we are concerned with and the one first mentioned in the Cheraws District of South Carolina.

BARNABAS HENAGAN, a son of James (Sweeny) Henagan believed born about 1750, perhaps in the Cheraws District, South Carolina or in North Carolina and died in Marlborough District, South Carolina in 1826. He married three times; the first to Lucretia (surname unknown); the second to Catherine (surname unknown); and the third to Elizabeth Covington. Barnabas and Lucretia Henagan had it is believed four children as follows: (a) Darby born in 1774 and believed to have died about 1820; (b) John (date of birth unknown) and died in 1812 in Marlborough District, South Carolina; (c) Lucretia born March 22, 1777 and died August 2, 1851; (d) a daughter (name, date of birth and death unknown). The second marriage of Barnabas and Catherine Henagan is believed to have been between 1800 and 1810 and they had two children as follows: (a) Barnabas L. born about 1810 and died in Mississippi in 1870; (b) Catherine (date of birth unknown) died in Copiah County, Mississippi May 6, 1886 (buried in Baton Cemetery on Pearl River). The third marriage of Barnabas Henagan to Elizabeth Covington was on December 23, 1825 - no children by the third marriage. The last will and testament of Barnabas Henagan was signed on February 1, 1826 and probated May 3, 1826 and recorded in Will Book A, page 143 in Marlboro County, South Carolina. The last will and testament of Elizabeth Henagan (third wife of Barnabas Henagan) was signed on April 29, 1850 and probated July 30, 1851 and recorded in Will Book A, page 294 in Marlboro County, South Carolina.

DARBY HENAGAN, a son of Barnabas and Lucretia Henagan, believed to have been born about 1800 and 1810 shows that he was the head of a family in Marion District, South Carolina with numerous children. It is thought that he lived in the North-Eastern part of Marion District (the part which is now Dillon County) and near the Marlborough District line. It is believed that he died after 1818 as he was a witness to a conveyance of land to John Bethea on August 5, 1818 and the United States Census of 1820 does not show him as the head of a family either in Marion or Marlborough Districts so it is assumed that he had died prior to the 1820 United States Census. He married Drusilla (surname, date of birth and death unknown). Sellers' History of Marion County refers to Dr. Barnabas K. Henagan's mother as being a Bethea (Dr. Barnabas K. Henagan was a son of Darby and Drusilla Henagan) and an old letter that Dr. Henagan wrote to a friend, William Johnson, in Williamsburg District, South Carolina on March 12, 1840 introducing Dr. Alfred W. Bethea gives some indication that the Henagan and Bethea families were related. The following extract of this letter is quoted: "Dear Sir: The bearer hereof, my friend and relative, Doctor Alfred Bethea, has at my instance determined to visit your section of the country with the view to the selection of a situation in which to locate himself for the practice of medicine....." Mr. David W. Bethea, who assisted Colonel William C. Harllee in compiling information for Kinfolks, had this to say regards the mother of Dr. B. K. Henagan and the following is quoted from Kinfolks, Volume III (p.2367): "I think Sellers' statement that Governor B. K. Henagan's mother was a Bethea is a mistake. Mr. Sellers knew there was some connection between Henagan and Bethea families and probably thought it that way. (DWD)." The following are children of Darby and Drusilla Henagan that lived and grew to manhood: (a) Ephriam L. born October 4, 1797, died November 16, 1843, and married Ann (Nancy) McInnis January 17, 1822; (b) Barnabas Kelet born June 7, 1798 died January 10, 1855 - married twice, first to Mary Savage Gibson on April 21, 1831 second to Mrs. Ann Wickham Ellerbe (widow of John C. Ellerbe), (c) Drusilla married Lewis E. Stubbs, (d) Lucretia married Alexander McCollum.

JOHN HENAGAN, a son of Barnabas and Lucretia Henagan born in Marlborough District and died prior to February 7, 1812. He married Elizabeth Ridgel who survived him. They had the following children: (a) Lucretia born January 5, 1808 (date of death unknown); (b) Elhanan born January 20, 1810 (date of death unknown).

LUCRETIA HENAGAN, a daughter of Barnabas and Lucretia Henagan, born in Marlborough District March 22, 1777, died August 3, 1851. She married Francis Miles and they had one child: Francis J. Miles born July 20, 1812 and died June 18, 1855. Francis J. Miles married Amanda E. Henagan, a daughter of Ephriam and Ann (Nancy) McInnis Henagan.

BARNABAS L. HENAGAN, JR., a son of Barnabas and Catherine Henagan, born in Marlborough District about 1810 and died in Mississippi in 1870. He married Martha E. (surname unknown) about 1834 and they had six children as follows: (a) Alexander Sparks born September 22, 1837 and died April 29, 1896 in Catahoula Parish, Louisiana; (b) Samuel A. (killed in battle at Sharpsburg, Maryland September 17, 1862); (c) Mary Ann (married John W. Mangum of Scott County, Mississippi - there were a number of children born to this couple); (d) Martha E. (Married Thomas H. Stubbs); (e) Lucy E. (believed to have married a Mr. Hooks); (f) Barnabas L. Alexander Sparks Henagan married Sophie Stingley May 12, 1864 of Palahatchie, Mississippi and they had eight children as follows: George Barns; Oliver Alexander; Willie Paine; Magnolia Caroline; Cecil Leonidas; Edna Cornelia; James Marvin and Zarada.

CATHERINE HENAGAN, a daughter of Barnabas and Catherine Henagan (date of birth unknown) died in Copiah County, Mississippi May 6, 1886 (believed to be buried in an unmarked grave in Baton Cemetery on Pearl River.) Catherine Henagan married Tristram Bethea Walter and had children as follows: (a) Barnabas; (b) John; (c) Alfred Bethea; (d) Phillip; (e) Elizabeth (married James F. Belsher); (f) Jane; (g) Margaret L. Several of the children died at an early age and are buried in the Bethea Sweat Swamp Cemetery near Little Rock, South Carolina.

EPHRIAM L. HENAGAN, a son of Darby and Drusilla Henagan, born October 4, 1797 and died November 16, 1843. He married Ann (Nancy) McInnis January 17, 1822 daughter of Malcolm and Mary McInnis of Marion District, South Carolina and there were thirteen children as follows: (a) John Williford born November 22, 1822 and died a Prisoner of War on Johnson Island, Ohio April 22, 1865; (b) Angus Barnabas born November 29, 1823, died December 22, 1899; (c) Amanda Elizabeth born July 1, 1825 - died November 12, 1912; (d) Julia Ann born March 24, 1827 - died July 5, 1900; (e) Charles Stuart born October 6, 1829 - died June 13, 1901; (f) Darby born April 21, 1831 - died November 7, 1899; (g) Malcolm McInnis born December 28, 1832 - died November 22, 1862; (h) Mary Jane Lucretia born October 7, 1834 - died September 13, 1847; (i) Ann Elizabeth born March 1, 1836 - died (unknown); (j) Effie born January 17, 1838 - died 1886; (k) Ephriam Marion born July 6, 1839 - died from wounds in battle at Yorktown, Virginia May 3, 1862; (l) Kathleen Billingsley born March 6, 1842 - died April 16, 1897; (m) James Madison born July 30, 1843 - died May 22, 1903.

The following Obituary was copied from THE LIVINGSTON JOURNAL, Livingston, (Sumter County), Alabama dated February 22, 1884; "Mrs. Nancy Henagan was born in Marion District, South Carolina, 22nd March 1801 and died at the residence of her son, Major C. S. Henagan, near Epes' Station, Sumter County, Alabama, January 10th, 1884. She married in 1822 to Mr. E. L. Henagan, and became the mother of thirteen children - twelve of whom lived to see their majority. Four died during the late war and eight survive her.

"From her long and successful life we gather the following facts:

"She was a woman of untiring energy and industry. Endowed with a strong mind and eminently practical, she addressed herself to her life-work with commendable zeal and what she did was always well done. Amid the pressure of domestic cares she seemed ever at ease, and fully up to every demand.

"She was charitable and kind to all -- always putting the best construction on the action of others and slow to think evil of any one. Her hospitality was marked and generous. She took special pleasure in entertaining her friends, and retained this fondness for their company through the infirmities of old age.

"Her Christian character was fully developed - pure and spotless. In early life she made a profession of religion and united with the M.E. Church, South, in which she lived a consistent and devoted member until her death. Her piety was of a cheerful type - never becoming morose, fault-finding or despondent. She loved the church, and for a half century labored and prayed for the "Peace of Jerusalem". Even in extreme age, when her mind and memory were failing, her face would become radiant with joy at the mere mention of her Saviour. Her life passed away as quietly and serenely as a summer evening. Surrounded by devoted children, without suffering or fear, she "fell on sleep" and went to rest with God. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of man is peace."

The seven sons and three son-in-laws of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan all served in the Confederate Army. The oldest son, John Williford, never married. At the death of his father he took over as head of the family and helped his mother raise and educate the large family of brothers and sisters. He was very prominent in military and political life of his county and State and commanded the Eight South Carolina Volunteers during the Confederate War.

The following is quoted from Dickert's History of Kershaw's Brigade (p. 423):
"Colonel J. W. Henagan was born November 22, 1822, in Marlboro County, South Carolina. Was the son of E.L. Henagan and wife, Ann McInnis. His father was a Scotch-Irishman. His mother was Scotch. Was educated at Academy in Bennettsville and Pernassus. Was elected Sheriff of Marlboro County in October, 1852, and went into office February 1853. In 1860 was elected to the Legislature. Was re-elected to the Legislature in 1863.

"Prior to the war was prominent in militia service, serving consecutively as Captain Colonel and Brigadier General. In March, 1861 volunteered, and in April became Lieutenant Colonel of Eight South Carolina Volunteers and went with the regiment to Virginia. Was in the battle of Bull Run or First Manassas. In 1862, he became by election Colonel of the Eight South Carolina Volunteers and served in that capacity until his capture near Winchester in fall of 1864 when he was sent a prisoner to Johnson's Island, Ohio. Here he died a prisoner of war, April 22, 1865.

"No regiment of the Confederacy saw harder service or was engaged in more battles than the Eight South Carolina of Kershaw's Brigade and no officer of that Brigade bore himself with more conspicuous gallantry than Colonel Henagan. He was always at his post and ready to go forward when so ordered. There was little or no fear in him to move into battle, and he was always sure, during the thickest of the fight, cheering on his men to victory.

"Colonel Henagan, as a citizen of the County, was as generous as brave. His purse was open to the needs of the poor.... He knew no deception, and no respect for the sycophant. Loved his country. A friend to be relied on. Was a farmer by profession. A good politician. Was a very quiet man, but always expressed his views firmly and candidly when called upon."

ANGUS BARNABAS HENAGAN, the second son, married Elizabeth Peterkin of Marlboro County, September 14, 1848. Elizabeth Peterkin was a daughter of Jessie Peterkin and a great, great great granddaughter of James Peterkin that settled in Maryland about 1674. James Peterkin was one of the commissioners appointed by the Assembly of Maryland in 1683 to purchase land and lay out the town of Dorchester, Dorchester County, Maryland. James Peterkin also served in the Provincial forces in the campaign against the Nanticoke Indians in 1678 under Captain Thomas Taylor from Dorchester County, Maryland. Elizabeth Peterkin Henagan was also a great granddaughter of Jesse Vining, a Private in Francis Marion's Brigade that served so conspicuously in the American Revolution. Angus Barnabas Henagan attended the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York for two years and served during the Confederate War as a Private in the 19th Battalion Cavalry, South Carolina Volunteers. The only one of the seven sons of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan that did not become a commissioned officer. Angus Barnabas and Elizabeth Peterkin Henagan had six children as follows: (a) Ephriam Lowndes born August 8, 1849 - died (unknown); (b) Jesse born July 30, 1851 - died March 18, 1923; (c) John Calhoun born December 6, 1853 - died October 16, 1931; (d) Sallie McRae born March 24, 1856 - died December 10, 1919; (e) Annie Peterkin born January 6, 1859 - died August 6, 1896; (f) James Harilee born August 30, 1861 - died November 12, 1942.

AMANDA ELIZABETH HENAGAN, the oldest daughter of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan married twice. The first marriage was to Francis J. Miles of Marlborough District, South Carolina. Francis J. Miles born July 20, 1812 - died June 18, 1855. They had one child Mary Francis Miles (date of birth unknown) and died June 6, 1899. The second marriage was to Dr. Allen E. Moore of York, Alabama and one child was born to them, a daughter - Anna. A granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. Moore, Mrs. C. A. Stanfield, lives at 907 39th Avenue, Meridian, Mississippi. Other descendants of Amanda E. Henagan are living in Alabama and Mississippi. Francis J. Miles is buried in Parnassus Cemetery, Elenheim, South Carolina. Dr. and Mrs. Moore, Mary Francis Miles Gowdy and a number of her children and husband are buried in Myrtle Wood Cemetery, Livingston, Alabama.

CHARLES STUART HENAGAN, the third son of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan married twice. The first marriage to Isabelle Brown of Marlborough District, South Carolina and they had the following children: (a) Charles Stuart born November 13, 1863 - died December 8, 1868; (b) James Darby born November 22, 1866 - died December 17, 1899; (c) William Brown born April 8, 1868 - died June 7, 1927. The second marriage was to Mary Matheson of Marlborough County, South Carolina December 6, 1882 and one child born to them: Margaret Isabelle born November 13, 1884 and living at 105 Matheson Street, Bennettsville, South Carolina. Margaret Isabelle Henagan married Thomas Breeden McLaurin November 12, 1907 and they have one daughter, Mary Henagan McLaurin, that married J. A. Weatherly July 17, 1955. Dr. James Darby Henagan married Ellen McAlpine of Greene County, Alabama January 24, 1895 and they had one daughter, Mrs. Ellen Hope (Vail) Grover living at 2524 Bush Blvd., Birmingham, Alabama. Charles Stuart Henagan moved from Marlboro County, South Carolina to Sumter County, Alabama prior to the Confederate war. He entered the Confederate Army with the 36th Alabama Infantry and rose to the rank of Major, was captured at Missionary Ridge and imprisoned at Johnson's Island, Ohio. William Brown Henagan, son of Major Charles Stuart and Isabelle Brown Henagan married Maud Smith of Gainesville, Alabama April 10, 1895 and they had the following children: (a) Charles Stuart born January 14, 1896 - living at 3816 South 11th Avenue, Birmingham, Alabama; (b) Annie Isabelle born August 16, 1897 - died July 16, 1925; (c) Margaret Louise born December 22, 1910 - died May 26, 1912. Charles Stuart Henagan has two married children that live in Birmingham, a son, James Vann Henagan and a daughter, Mrs. Florence Vann West. He has a son, Charles Stuart Henagan, Jr. that is married and lives at 355 Beechwood Drive, Athens, Georgia. This son is with the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, Athens, Georgia.

DARBY HENAGAN, the fourth son of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan was reared on the home plantation, received a high school education, and in 1856 and 1857 attended Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; In 1858 he graduated from the South Carolina Medical College at Charleston, South Carolina, and until 1860 practiced his profession at Rockingham, North Carolina, and then located at Sumterville, Alabama. He entered the Confederate Army as a Surgeon of the 36th Alabama Infantry at the outbreak of the war and later served as an assistant Surgeon of Bay Batteries at Mobile, Alabama. After the war, he resumed his practice at Sumterville where he continued to reside until 1868, when he moved to Epes Station, Alabama, where he was physician and surgeon to the entire community, and also held large planting interests. He was universally respected and was recognized by the proprofession as a skillful and well informed practitioner; they showed their appreciation by electing him as the presiding officer of the Sumter County Medical Society. He married in 1870, Catherine Etheridge of Sumter County, Alabama. They did not have children.

MALCOLM MC INNIS HENAGAN, the fifth son of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan married Celeste Martha Hunter of Darlington, South Carolina June 2, 1858. Prior to the Confederate War he and a brother, Major Charles S. Henagan operated a mercantile store in Bennettsville, South Carolina. At the outbreak of the Confederate War, he entered the service as a Quartermaster of the Eight Regiment South Carolina Volunteers and served in this capacity until wounded in battle and returned to his home. He died from the wounds November 22, 1862 in Marlboro County, South Carolina. Mrs. Celeste Hunter Henagan born May 8, 1839 - died February 12, 1925 and is buried in Lake Park Cemetery, Laurel, Mississippi. There were four children born to this couple as follows: (a) Loundes E. born February 26, 1859 - died (unknown); (b) George James born May 1860 - died 1900 (buried in El Paso, Texas); (c) John W. born May 9, 1861 - died June 2, 1929; (d) Malcolm McInnis born August 27, 1862 - died March 21, 1938 (buried in Myrtle Wood Cemetery, Livingston, Alabama with her husband James Wood Tisdale and several children). Mrs. W.H. Leggett, Sr., a granddaughter of Malcolm McInnis and Celeste Hunter Henagan lives at 556-6th Avenue, Laurel, Mississippi.

KATHLEEN BILLINGSLEY HENAGAN, the youngest daughter of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan married William H. Brown of Sumterville, Alabama August 15, 1866. They had five children as follows: (a) John Louis born November 28, 1869 - died May 22, 1917; (b) Charles Allen born January 5, 1872 - died July 27, 1939; (c) Darby Henagan born December 23, 1873 - died December 27, 1929; (d) Isla E. born September 4, 1876 - died December 15, 1942; (e) Julia Kathleen born August 18, 1879 - died January 29, 1900. There are many descendants of this couple living in Alabama and Florida which include the following: Mr. William H. Bancroft, 745 Vanderbilt St. Birmingham, Alabama; Mr. Darby H. Brown, 213 North 21st Street, Birmingham, Alabama; Mrs. Rosa B. Powell, Box 232 Ozona, Florida. Darby Henagan Brown was instrumental in founding the Birmingham Infirmary which today is known as the West End Baptist Hospital of Birmingham as well as promoting and helping in many other charitable and civic projects for his city.

JAMES MADISON HENAGAN, the youngest child of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan was only nineteen years of age when he was appointed Captain and Quartermaster of the Eight Regiment South Carolina Volunteers after his brother, Malcolm McInnis was wounded in battle and had to return home, and served in this capacity until the end of the war. After the close of the war he went with other members of the family to Sumter County, Alabama. He was prominent in the political and civic life of his county and served as Clerk of Court for Sumter County, Alabama in 1883. He married twice - the first time to Laura A. Miller of Sumter County, Alabama June 10, 1880 and the second time to Kate A. Brown of Sumterville, Alabama about 1900. There were two sons by the first marriage: (a) Stephen Miller born November 18, 1881 - died January 25, 1942; (b) Samuel Perry born April 11, 1883 - died (unknown). Mrs. Agnes Coughlin Henagan, widow of Stephen Miller, lives at 4108 Terrace Road, Birmingham, Alabama. Stephen Miller Henagan entered the United States Navy when a young man, September 26, 1902 and served continuously until his retirement as a Chief Machinist May 11, 1934. Mrs. Elizabeth H. Henagan, widow of Samuel Perry Henagan lives at 211-A Belmont Avenue, Long Beach 3, California. A son, Samuel Perry Henagan, Jr., lives at 9325-A San Luis Avenue, South Gate, California.

EPHRIAM MARION HENAGAN, a son of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan entered the Confederate War at the beginning of same as a member of the Eight Regiment South Carolina Volunteers with two of his brothers, Lieutenant Colonel John W. Henagan, and Captain Malcolm M. Henagan. He was wounded near Yorktown, Virginia and died in an ambulance during the retreat of the Confederate forces May 3, 1862. He was elected a lieutenant while in hospital but never lived to join his command in Hampton's Legion.

ANN ELIZABETH HENAGAN, a daughter of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan married Augustus Evans of South Carolina. Have been unable to find information of this couple and don't know if they had any children.

The following daughters of Ephriam L. and Ann McInnis Henagan never married: (a) Julia Ann; (b) Effie M.; (c) Mary Jane Lucretia. Mary Jane Lucretia died at the age of thirteen, September 13, 1847 and is buried in Parnassus Cemetery, Blenheim, South Carolina. Julia Ann and Effie moved to Sumter County, Alabama with their Mother after the close of the Confederate War and lived with their mother and brother, Major Charles S. Henagan, at Sumterville and Epes Station, Alabama. They are buried with their mother, Ann McInnis Henagan, in the old McInnis Cemetery, Epes, Alabama.

BARNABAS KELET HENAGAN, a son of Darby and Drusilla Henagan, born June 7, 1798 and died January 10, 1855. He was widely known in the political history and life of South Carolina, having taken a decided part in politics and filled various important offices. In 1834 he was elected by the District of Marlborough to the State Senate, and in the year succeeding the conclusion of his term of office, was elected by the General Assembly of South Carolina Lieutenant Governor under Governor Patrick Noble. On the death of Governor Noble April 7, 1840 he acceded to the executive office and discharged its duties until December 10, 1840, the remainder of the term. He afterwards moved to Marion District, South Carolina and in 1844 was elected to the State Senate from this district. In 1846 he was elected Secretary of State of South Carolina, the duties which he discharged for four years, and on retiring from this devoted himself to the pursuits and occupation of the planter, physician, and private citizen, without ceasing however, to take an active interest in all events and occurrences affecting the body politic. His attachment to the principles of Jeffersonian Democracy was decided and marked, and he was an ardent admirer of John C. Calhoun, who he considered the best exponent of those principles. Governor Henagan was educated as a physician, thought to have been a graduate of Heidelberg University, Germany, and in the earlier period of his life devoted himself to the active duties and toils of his profession with such success as to command a large share of patronage, and conciliate general approval in Williamsburg, Marlborough and Marion Districts of South Carolina. In all the relations of life he was simple hearted, unostentatious and faithful, cultivating the good will of all who came within his circle of intercourse. He married twice, the first to Mary Savage Gibson of Marion District, South Carolina April 21, 1831 and to this union were born nine children, the second marriage was to Mrs. Ann Maria Wickham Ellerbe, the widow of John C. Ellerbe, of Marion District, South Carolina. The children by the first marriage are as follows: (a) James Hamilton born June 28, 1832 - killed in battle at Gaines Mill, Virginia, June 28, 1862 (Captain Company "H" Orr's Regiment, South Carolina Volunteers); (b) Mary Francis born July 27, 1834 - died August 13, 1835; (c) Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Calhoun born September 3, 1836 - died October 1847; (d) Andrew Barnabas born August 22, 1838 - died November 5, 1885; (e) Robert Young Hayne born May 6, 1840 - died January 31, 1915; (f) William Lowndes born December 22, 1841 - died September 22, 1844; (g) Alice Caroline born March 4, 1844 - died (unknown); (h) Mary Rutledge born October 2, 1845 - died November 3, 1917; (i) Samuel Jordan Gibson born March 23, 1847 - died (unknown). The four sons living at the outbreak of the war in 1861 all served with the Confederate Volunteers from South Carolina.

A granddaughter, Mrs. Louise N. Bissonette, 56 Society Street, Charleston, South Carolina has been most helpful in giving information on her grandparents. Mrs. Bissonette is the youngest daughter of Mary Rutledge Henagan that married John Northrop. There are many descendants living in Charleston and Columbia, South Carolina. Alice Caroline Henagan married Abraham Giles Johnson and there are descendants living in Charleston Columbia, South Carolina; Gastonia, North Carolina and New York. Robert Young Hayne Henagan married Mary Rhodes Waring November 28, 1871 and they had two daughters, Anne Rhodes and Mary Gibson.

DRUSCILLA C. HENAGAN, a daughter of Darby and Drusilla Henagan born about 1815 and died (unknown). She married Lewis E. Stubbs of Marlborough District, South Carolina and had the following children: (a) Cornelea E.; (b) Victoria A.; (c) Lewis; (d) Georgiana. Cornelea E. Stubbs married John W. Wallace. A great granddaughter, Ruth Allen Wallace, married Arnold Kornahrens and are living in Summerville, South Carolina.

ALEXANDER SPARKS HENAGAN, a son of Barnabas L. and Martha E. Henagan was born in Marlborough District, South Carolina and moved with his father to Mississippi prior to the Confederate War and believed to have located in Scott County. He married Sophie Stingley of Palahatchie, Mississippi May 12, 1864 and there were eight children born to them as follows: (a) George Barna born May 7, 1866 - died April 14, 1889; (b) Oliver Alexander born October 17, 1867 - died August 13, 1868; (c) Willie Paine born August 5, 1869 - died October 1892; (d) Magnolia Carolina born January 17, 1872 - died September 1883; (e) Cecil Leonidas born May 11, 1874 - died February 22, 1942 (f) Edna Cornelia born October 5, 1876 - died April 1877; (g) James Marvin born December 19, 1885 - living in Jena, Louisiana; (h) Zarada born July 29, 1890 - died June 30, 1899. Alexander Sparks Henagan was a physician and practiced in Mississippi prior to moving in the early 1870's to Catahoula Parish, Louisiana where he continued to follow his profession until his death April 29, 1896. The only surviving child of Dr. Alexander Sparks and Sophie Henagan is James Marvin Henagan, who is an attorney in Jena, Louisiana. James Marvin Henagan and wife have three children: Mrs. Julia Henagan Ory; Mrs. Jessie Maris Bass; and James Marvin Henagan, Jr.

Levere V. Henagan, a grandson of Dr. Alexander Sparks Henagan and a son of Cecil Leonidas Henagan married Lucille King July 14, 1934 and lives on Ellerbe Road (P.O. Box 6457, Cedar Grove Station), Shreveport, Louisiana. They have three children as follows: (a) George Leonidas; (b) Patrick Morris; (c) Patricia Maureene.

There are other descendants of Dr. Alexander Sparks and Sophie Henagan living in Louisiana.

ANGUS BARNABAS AND ELIZABETH PETERKIN HENAGAN had six children. Three of the children, Ephriam Lowndes, Jesse Peterkin, and Sallie McRae never married. (a) John Calhoun married Hortense Beauharnais McCormac of Marion County, South Carolina January 25, 1883. They had four children, one an infant daughter that died soon after birth; the other three were as follows: Elizabeth Corrine born February 12, 1894 and married Henry C. Hamer of Marlboro County, South Carolina November 24, 1920; John Calhoun born December 20, 1895 and married Helen Muse Kerr of Bradley, South Carolina June 26, 1923; Annie Covington born September 28, 1898 and married Edward M. Boykin of Camden, South Carolina November 9, 1927. (b) Annie Peterkin married Calvin Cole Covington of Rockingham, North Carolina December 28, 1882. They had three children as follows (none married): Robert Ledbetter born October 11, 1883 and died June 14, 1885; Darby Henagan born February 27, 1885 and died September 28, 1943; Annie Laurie born April 15, 1889 and living at the Covington home, River Road, Rockingham, North Carolina. (c) James Harllee married twice - the first to Mary Bellinger Wannamaker of St. Matthews, South Carolina June 7, 1888 - the second time to Adelle Salley MacKay of Orangeburg, South Carolina February 4, 1903. There were six children by the first marriage as follows: John Wannamaker born December 21, 1889 and married Mattie Lee Smoak of St. Matthews April 22, 1914; Eleanor Marion born November 21, 1891 and married Barrington Clemens King of Manor, Texas; James Edward born January 16, 1894 - died September 16, 1908; Angus Barnie born October 23, 1895 - died May 21, 1896; Annie Elizabeth born October 6, 1898 and married Walter H. Sanders of St. Matthews December 31, 1920; Emmie Pou born July 29, 1900 and married John X. Weeks of St. Matthews December 29, 1926. There were no children by the second marriage. There are numerous grandchildren and great grandchildren of James Harllee and Mary Wannamaker Henagan living in Columbia and St. Matthews, South Carolina, Charlotte, North Carolina and Orlando, Florida.

Other Henagan families have been located while making the genealogical search of the James (Sweeny) Henagan family that settled in South Carolina about 1756. It is not known at this time whether they are related or descended from James (Sweeny) Henagan. Some of these families are as follows: (a) Several Henagan families that live in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Mr. Henry Hamer Henagan, 2325 Cable Street, Baton Rouge has written that his grandfather was Francis Marion Henagan and that he served in the Confederate Army from Louisiana. His grandfather had a brother named John and a sister named Mary. Mr. T. R. Henagan and Mr. Rivers B. Henagan both have families and are living in Baton Rouge. (b) Mr. John H. Henagan, Box 631, De Quincy, Louisiana has written that his grandfather was J. R. Henagan of Amite County, Mississippi and that his grandfather married Octavia C. Haygood November 19, 1870. His father was William Ennie Henagan and married Eva Andrus. There are numerous descendants of J.R. and Octavia Haygood Henagan living in Louisiana and Texas. (c) Mrs. H. I. Forsyth, 6045 Colbert Street, New Orleans 24, Louisiana has written that she has a half-brother, Charles Anthony Henagan, born in Vicksburg, Mississippi in 1903, whose father was William Thomas Henagan and grandfather was James Henagan. James Henagan married Bridget Barry and they had a number of children. (d) A family that spell their name HENNIGAN live in Pineville, North Carolina. In looking over many old records the Henagan name has been found spelled in a number of different ways. Mr. Mr. Oscar R. Hennigan is a grandson of James Hennigan that married Harriett Orr and they had four children as follows: Jack, Oscar, Dick and Sue. His father was Jack Hennigan. James E. Hennigan was a Private in Company "F" 49th Regiment from Mecklenburg County, North Carolina during the Confederate War and enlisted May 5, 1862. There is a grave in the Sharon Cemetery, Charlotte, North Carolina of James Hennigan with the following data on the tombstone: Born June 11, 1811 - died August 13, 1876. It is believed that this is the grandfather of Mr. Oscar R. Hennigan of Pineville, North Carolina. Another grave in the Sharon Cemetery of Margaret Hennigan with the following data on the tombstone: Age 42 years, 4 months 17 days - died March 27, 1860. There are some old records in the Mecklenburg County, North Carolina Courthouse that show early land transactions to persons with the name Hennigan in the late 1700's or early 1800's and it is planned to check these at an early date.

JOHN CALHOUN HENAGAN, who has compiled the information on the Henagan family is a grandson of Angus Barnabas and Elizabeth Peterkin Henagan of Marlboro County, South Carolina and a son of John Calhoun and Hortense McCormac Henagan of Dillon County, South Carolina. Since retirement on January 31, 1957 as a Division Commander of the 51st Infantry Division, South Carolina National Guard, he has devoted quite some time in genealogical search of the Henagan families. Old records have been checked in Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and South Carolina.

Correction:

Please correct page 3 of this sketch (see upper right-hand corner: Henagan 3) as follows, (line 2. paragraph re Darby Henagan was inadvertently omitted and should be added):

"DARBY HENAGAN, a son of Barnabas and Lucretia Henagan, believed to have been born about 1774 in Marlborough District, South Carolina. The United States Census of 1800 and 1810...."(etc.)
